179 ARMIJO HIGH SCHOOL STUDENTS HONORED TODAY FOR FINANCIAL LITERACY ACHIEVEMENT

Dixon, Calif. — First Northern Bank (FNRN: OTCQB) celebrated the certification of 179 students today in the First Northern Financial Scholars Program at Armijo High School in Fairfield, Calif.

The Honorable Harry T. Price, Mayor of Fairfield, Calif., kicked off the event. "I commend you for taking advantage of this First Northern Bank program," he told the high school seniors in the audience. "Not many banks are willing to do what First Northern has done ... you should thank First Northern."

Armijo Teachers FaraLee Wright and Andrew Llorente and First Northern Bank President/CEO Louise Walker then presented certificates to the students, who completed the innovative financial literacy program, which is being sponsored by First Northern Bank in six high schools throughout their banking region, at no cost to the schools. As of today, 388 Armijo High School students have successfully completed the program this year.

State Senator Lois Wolk and State Assembly Member Jim Frazier were represented at the ceremony by Lisa Chavez and Brandon King, respectively, who also presented certificates of recognition to the students. Solano County District 3 Supervisor Jim Spering's representative, Sabine Goerke-Shrode, recognized the pioneering efforts of Armijo Principal Eric Tretten and teachers Wright and Llorente.

Armijo High School teamed with First Northern Bank to incorporate the EverFi Financial Literacy E-Learning Platform into students' existing curricula. This online program uses the latest in new media technologies – adaptive-pathing, 3-D gaming, social networking, online animation, video, and messaging tools to bring complex financial concepts to life. Using the EverFi platform, Armijo High School students have become certified in more than 600 personal finance topics, such as budgeting, saving, using credit cards wisely, and financing higher education.

"Financial literacy skills are not addressed in state standards," said Louise Walker, who also serves as a member of the California Controller's Financial Literacy Advisory Committee. "First Northern is committed to building the next generation of financially literate adults, helping these students make more informed personal financial decisions today, and in the future as they enter the workforce, buy their first car and, start a family or build their own businesses."

"By participating in this program, Armijo High is taking the lead on a statewide financial literacy initiative powered by EverFi. The partnership represents an innovative private-sector solution to our education system – implementing programs that provide students with the critical life skills to help them succeed – at no cost to the taxpayer," said EverFi Executive Vice President Mike Fee, also in attendance.
